Graduation Congratulations class of 2023

A final Thought

As another school year comes to a close I realized something at graduation last evening. I walked through the T & I hallways to get to my seat for graduation, I was met with senior students clapping, and shaking my hand and talking about memories of their previous two years. This really put into perspective what the students time here meant to them, and to me as well. Often in schools there is teacher burnout, I have been victim of this as well. You wonder if your making a difference, it becomes monotonous. Occasionally there will be conflicts between students, between students and staff and between staff members. Sometimes staff and students push through personal issues and home issues that they keep to themselves. It might sound like a cliché, but this school, our staff, and our students make a difference in our community. And sometimes we need to be reminded of that. Last night was my reminder - Nathan Duke
